Emma D. Lemon's Entertainment.

Emma D. Lemon attracted a large audience at the Town Hall on Monday evening, when her first appearance in this place was made. The expectations of her friends were fully realized, and her efforts to please were crowned with success. The program was varied, yet each and every piece was creditably presented. "How Ruby Played" brought down the house and put everybody in good humor. Mrs. Lemon, however, excelled in her humorous selections in "Biddy McGinnis at the Photographer's," and in response to an encore gave "The Dutchman and His Eggs." In the "Recitation from the Court Scene in Henry VIII," Mrs. Lemon did admirably, but her most successful presentation was that of "Searching for the Sain." Tears started unbidden from many eyes as this touching selection was being rendered in so life-like and realistic a manner. Mrs. Lemon's solos were also received with marked pleasure, as was evidenced by her being twice encored. Her voice is under perfect control, and is sweet and richly modulated. Her costume is rich, but not gaudy. Her manner is reserved and pleasing, and not at all staid, as is too frequently the case with those who are possessed of some measure of talent. To retain the attention and sympathy of an audience through a lengthy program alone is a difficult task but Mrs. Lemon succeeds in doing this.—Wallaceburg, Canada.

At Reynolds opera house Tuesday evening, October 11, under auspices of the Women's Relief Corps.

Our Boys Defeated.
Last Saturday the boys of the Reynoldsville High School were defeated in a game of base ball at Brookville by a nine representing the Brookville High School. The score was 10-0. Notwithstanding the result the game was a very much better one than the score would indicate. Brookville High school is fortunate in having several first nine players on its list and two or three others who play on the second team, while our nine is composed almost entirely of young and inexperienced players. The game was fairly and honestly won, however, and it remains for the Reynoldsville boys to turn the trick next Saturday when the return game is to be played at Reynoldsville.

The members of our team say that they were handsomely treated at Brookville and ask for a good attendance Saturday. To defray the necessary expenses connected with bringing the nine up from Brookville a small admission fee will be charged. The game will be called promptly at three o'clock.

Trolley Car Notes.
The Jefferson Traction Company expected to be running trolley cars into Sykesville not later than the first of October, but cannot run cars to that place until the power house at Prescottville is completed, and some of the machinery for the power house has gone astray in the shipping and the delay is unavoidable so far as the Traction Company is concerned. It will only require a couple of days after the machinery arrives to give the people trolley service between Reynoldsville and Sykesville.

The Jefferson Traction Company is now making the connections to run cars up Fifth and down Main street as far as Fourth street, and it will not be many days until the cars will be running down Main street. The line will be extended to iron bridge as soon as the work of paving that part of Main street is completed.

A Grand Rally.
Saturday, October 7th, 1904, at 3.30 p. m. at the Reynoldsville Hardware Company's store at which time we will give away absolutely free one of the greatest heating stoves in the world, The Peninsular Smoke Consuming Hot Blast, which can be seen in our window. What Tom Reynolds Says About the Peninsular Hot Blast Stove.

We were talking to Tom Reynolds the other day and asked him how he liked the Retort Peninsular stove he bought from the Reynoldsville Hardware Co. last winter? He said he used a good many kinds of stoves in his time but that this one was so far ahead of anything he ever had that he could not say too much in its favor. It burns but little coal and the heat it throws out would astonish you. The heat is much more healthy than gas and no more trouble than turning gas on and off. It keeps fire all night. My fire was not out all last winter. It heated three large rooms where before I had a stove in each room. If I was buying a thousand stoves, he remarked as he walked away, I would buy the Retort Peninsular from the Reynoldsville Hardware Company.

Talented Lady.

The entertainment given last Friday evening by Emma D. Lemon under the auspices of the Young People's Association of the Presbyterian church, was a rare treat for all present. The humorous, pathetic and dramatic selections rendered by the talented lady were true to the characters she assumed and brought hearty response from her delighted audience. She is the most graceful and natural elocutionist who has ever visited this city, and the appreciative listeners of Friday evening will wish her great success wherever she goes.—Ann Arbor Register.
